The Basics

1. Students get financial aid from different places. You can apply for assistance from the federal or state government, local banks or credit unions, civic or church groups, your or your parents' employer or union, and the college or university itself.
2. The middle of your junior year in high school is the best time to start asking about financial aid. Your best source of information (including application deadlines) is the financial aid officer at the college or university you want to attend.
3. When you ask for catalogues from colleges and universities, also ask for financial aid applications and related instructions. Apply even if you think you won't qualify. Be sure to meet due dates and complete all forms carefully. College and university funds are limited, and you can lose your chance to get some types of aid if you apply late.

Types of Student Aid

1. Grants & Scholarships: gifts of money that do not have to be paid back. Scholarships are usually awarded based on grades or some special talent; grants are usually awarded based on financial need.
2. Loans: borrowed funds that usually must be paid back with interest.
3. Loan Forgiveness Programs: borrowed funds that usually must be repaid by performing some type of service.
4. Tuition/Fee Exemptions: programs that decrease the tuition and/or fee charges for eligible students attending public colleges or universities.
5. Waivers: programs that allow some non-resident students to attend Texas public colleges or universities and pay the lower resident tuition rate.
6. Work-Study: part-time jobs provided by colleges and universities so students can work and earn money.

Students who apply for financial aid are offered an "aid package" by the college or university they apply to. The package often includes more than one type of aid. The total amount of aid in your package depends on your financial need. Most federal and state aid is awarded based on financial need rather than academic merit (grades). Your financial need is determined by the information you put on your Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

Applying for Financial Aid

All colleges and universities will ask you to file a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) if you are applying for financial aid.

You must complete a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), either on paper or on the Web, to apply for state and federal aid. You do not have to apply separately for each financial aid program! The information contained in the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is used to calculate your need for financial aid. High school counselors and college and university financial aid offices have copies of the paper application. The Web version is located at www.fafsa.ed.gov. Follow the instructions on the form or Web site to submit your completed form.

If you want to apply for aid for a fall term, complete and submit your Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) as soon as possible after you and your family complete your federal income tax form for the prior year, or by the college's or university's financial aid deadline -- whichever comes first. If you or your parents have not yet completed your taxes, you can use estimated tax information to complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). Keep in mind though, if these are not final figures, you may have to go back and make adjustments later and the aid your college awards to you may change based on new or corrected information.

Upon receiving your completed Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the processor will review it and calculate your Expected Family Contribution (EFC)--the amount you and your family will be

Education.Go Get It.

In 2001-2002, forty-one percent of students enrolled in college or university in Texas received some form of need-based financial aid.

The FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) is the application you need to complete to apply for financial aid. Print a Pre-Application FAFSA Worksheet and learn about other time-saving tips like requesting a Personal Identification Number (PIN) in the section titled "Before Beginning a FAFSA" at www.fafsa.ed.gov.

Complete your FAFSA as soon as possible after January 1 for the following summer, fall, and spring semesters. When applying for financial aid, keep track of application deadlines. Submitting your FAFSA by the college's or university's Priority Application Deadlines will ensure that you are given maximum consideration for financial aid.

expected to pay toward college costs. The calculation takes a lot of different things into consideration-- your parents' income, your earnings, your family's assets, the size of your family, and the number of people attending college at the same time. It also takes into account family expenses. These include income taxes paid, housing, clothing and food costs, and your parents' need to save for retirement.

Within four to six weeks of submitting a paper Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), or two to four weeks if you complete the FAFSA on the Web, you will receive a Student Aid Report (SAR). Read the report carefully. If corrections are needed, follow directions for making them. The Student Aid Report (SAR) will indicate your Expected Family Contribution (EFC) and report if you are eligible for a federal Pell Grant. If you are not eligible for a Pell Grant, don't worry! You might still qualify for other types of aid. The Pell Grant is targeted to students with the greatest financial need. Many students who do not get the Pell Grant receive other types of awards.

Calculating Financial Need

Most state and federal aid goes only to students with financial need, and need equals:

$$\begin{array}{r} \text{Cost of Attendance} \\ - \text{Expected Family Contribution (EFC)} \\ \hline \text{Other Gift Aid} \\ \hline \text{Financial Need} \end{array}$$

The Cost of Attendance includes tuition and fees, books and supplies, and living expenses. Your financial need is the "gap" between this cost figure and the Expected Family Contribution (EFC) the processor calculates your family can provide.

Each financial aid program has its own set of eligibility requirements. The information you give the aid office through your Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and other forms they ask you to submit (if required) allows the aid office to determine which programs you can qualify for.

After the aid office has the information from your Student Aid Report (SAR), it can calculate your financial need and decide which types of funds to offer you. Details on some of the programs you may be offered can be found on page 5 of this publication. After these decisions are made, the aid office sends you an award letter, listing your aid package. This letter is usually sent out by early summer. Generally, you may accept part or all of the aid awarded to you, but you will need to let the college know your response.

Facts About Loans

If you intend to borrow funds to help pay for your education, ask your college or university financial aid officer about the application process at their particular institution. The college can also help you find a lender--an organization able to loan the funds to you.

The least expensive educational loans are those targeted to financially needy students. These loans-- Subsidized Federal Stafford Loans and Perkins Loans--require no interest or repayment while the borrower is enrolled on at least a half-time basis.

Specialized, need-based loans, like the Health Education Loan (HELP), are also available to students in medical and allied health professions. In most of these programs, interest accumulates while the student is in school; but no repayment is required until the student drops below half-time enrollment.

Students who do not qualify for need-based aid also might be eligible to borrow money through the Unsubsidized Federal Stafford Loan Program, the College Access Loan (CAL) Program and the new Variable Rate College Access Loan (VCAL).

Parents may also borrow through the federal PLUS Loan Program and a variety of supplemental educational loan programs that your college financial aid office can tell you about.

Loan forgiveness programs provide money to students who sign contracts or agreements to perform certain work or services after completing college. If the student completes the services as agreed, no repayment is required. If the student fails to perform the service, the money received as a forgiveness loan has to be repaid with interest. Forgiveness loans are available to outstanding rural scholars, students in educator certification programs, and child-care workers seeking advanced credentials. All three programs

Many colleges and universities offer scholarships that are only open to students attending their school. Some of these are awarded based on merit, participation in school activities or enrollment in a specific major or degree program.

require the student to work for one or more years in the profession applicable to the educational loans the student is repaying.

Things to Remember

1. The amount of financial aid you qualify for is based on your financial need. Your Expected Family Contribution (EFC) will remain the same from one college or university to another; but your financial need may increase or decrease depending upon the costs of the college or university.
2. Colleges and universities handle "outside scholarships" (scholarships you bring with you to the school) differently. Most colleges or universities reduce the amount of institutional grant aid you receive to reflect the amount of your outside scholarship(s).
3. You must apply for aid each year. Your family's federal income tax return should be completed early, allowing you to complete your Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) accurately and on time. Using estimated information on this application means you may have to make corrections later.
4. Each college and university sets its own deadlines for applying for financial aid. Contact all colleges in which you are interested to learn about financial aid deadlines.
5. This is the most important investment you can make in your future. Take time to learn about your options before you make any decisions. Financial aid officers can help you find ways to pay for your education.

To Learn More About Financial Aid...

Your best source of information is the financial aid office at the college or university you wish to attend. General contact information for Texas colleges and universities can be found online at www.collegefortexans.com or can be requested by calling 800-242-3062 ext. 6387.

Questions regarding any of the information in this brochure can be directed to representative with the Texas Financial Aid Information Center.

Education. Go Get It.

For the best chance of success, you need to begin preparing for college long before it's time to apply. The better prepared you are, the easier it will be to do everything that's required for getting into college and getting on with your dreams.
